Notas: This excavate is back part of my cache search at the beginning of the test unit that will cut through St. 602. I think this should have been two levels because it went below the base of the retaining wall of the structure. The initial level would have been about 10 cm thick and the other about 15-20 cm. I noted that this material clay below level 03. It did at one time, but there was no plaster surface in this area except in rare patches.

Notas: This is the test pit. We are excavating in 1x1 m units, but after this level, it is going to put an end to this because it makes it really difficult to see architectural features. I am adding the numbers I keep creating imaginary walls. So the next level will have me clay.

We stopped this level when we hit a light gray brown soil with small to large clumps (level 10)
